The purpose is to engage more members of the community in the process than would be typical with the hope that more citizens will mean, better ideas, greater accountability and new people to serve on committees and Council in the future. The Planning Commission receives the draft report and identifies areas of oversight or clarification for the next draft so that there will be fewer required edits after the ‘final draft’ is prepared, reviewed and recommended to the council. Public comment was received with each citizen (approximately 12 citizens were present) and member of the planning commission given an opportunity to comment.
